Snow

Snow

Saitou didn't know why he was attracted to the cold snowflakes that fell to the grown that one cold morning, was it because snow was more pure and perfect than what he has done in his life as a Shinsengumi member? He didn't know but as he walked out to the grounds a soft hand touched his shoulder.

"Saitou are you ok?" Asked a concerned Chizuru, she was wearing her new western style clothes and was holding a bamboo umbrella to shield herself from the snows cold touch. Saitou's expression soften from its usual serious look, she had that effect on him whenever she was around him, she was just soâ€¦ Calming.

Saitou smiled and nodded his head as he replied back, "Yes, I'm just admiring the snowflakes." Chizuru looked up and smiled at them as well, and as one fell on her nose she laughed and said, "Yeah they sure are beautiful, even though they are cold at the touch."

Saitou looked at her and blushed softly, in the light of the snow as it fell down from the sky made her look like an angel that was sent down from heaven. He knew for a while that he has feelings for her that go beyond just friendship, but he couldn't bring himself to tell her just yetâ€¦ He was just waiting for the right moment.

Chizuru looked at him and asked him in a curious voice, "Are you ever scared when you go out to battle? I mean aren't you scared that you might not live to see a new day?" Saitou was now concerned, he looked at her and with a steady but worried tone, "Why would you ask something like that Yukimura?"

Chizuru blushed softly and replied, "Well it's just because I'm scared about you and the other's not coming back after a battle and you guys were the first real friends that I have ever made in my life." Saitou's eyes widened as she hugged him tightly and started to cry, he didn't know what else to do but hold her close and allow her to cry on his chest.

"Listen Yukimura, when we go out to battle there are times where I'm too scared to do or think anything because I don't want to think about what might happen, everybody here has that rational fear of death that we all face when we go into battle." Saitou said as Chizuru lifted her head up to look at him in the eyes, he wiped away her tear streaked face and smiled as he then said, "My life wouldn't be much to live for if I didn't have my guardian angel looking after me."

Chizuru softly blushed as Saitou bent down and kissed her forehead softly to show his affection and truth to his words. After that Chizuru said, "Look, the snow is falling a little lighter now." She smiled affectionately.

And it was true, the snow seemed to change speed and texture in perfect tempo of Saitou's feelings and so he truly did feel a close connection to the beautiful snowflakes.
